

Opening Remarks

Allan M. Brandt

Allan M. Brandt is the Dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at Harvard University. He is the Amalie Moses Kass Professor of the History of Medicine at Harvard Medical School and he holds a joint appointment in the Department of the History of Science at Harvard University where he served as chair from 2000-06. Brandt earned his undergraduate degree at Brandeis University and a Ph.D. in American History from Columbia University in 1983. His work focuses on social and ethical aspects of health, disease, medical practices, and policy in the twentieth century. Brandt is the author of No Magic Bullet: A Social History of Venereal Disease in the United States since 1880 (1987); and co-editor of Morality and Health (1997). He has written on the social history of epidemic disease; the history of public health and health policy; and the history of human subject research among other topics. His book on the social and cultural history of cigarette smoking in the U.S., The Cigarette Century: The Rise, Fall, and Deadly Persistence of the Product that Defined America, was published by Basic Books in 2007 (paperback, 2009). The book was awarded the Bancroft Prize in American History from Columbia University and the Arthur J. Visel tear Prize from the American Public Health Association. Brandt has been elected to the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. In 2004 he testified on behalf of the US Department of Justice in US v. Philip Morris, the civil racketeering case brought by the federal government against the tobacco industry.
